Local art show is free -- as always

By Betty Fairbairn Sokolich

The exhibit at the Arthur Turner Library, sponsored by the East Yolo Friends of the Library, for the month of June is the work of Folsom artist, Richard Meagher. The 16 watercolor paintings capture the essence of the landscapes he has visited and been inspired to express his extreme pleasure in the shapes found in nature and in urban street scenes.

A stunning, large watercolor, titled "The Dock at Ketchikan" dramatically portrays the fishing boats getting ready to leave the safety of the harbor for a day of fishing in the open sea. The variety of blues contrasted with the white describe the reflections of the boats in the moving water so perfectly you can feel the icy coldness and movement of the northern waters. Another boat scene is "Preparing for the Catch". A soft mist comes in from the ocean in Santa Barbara as the boats go through the preparations to leave.

Other scenes from Alaska have been a source of Meagher's inspiration, such as the old picturesque buildings in "Creek Street Ketchikan". Full of history's past wild times during the gold rush era, the buildings were once houses of ill-repute but now are a tourist attraction with their sprawling verandas by the creek side. The composition of the painting helps you to enter into the scene, an ability Meagher has with his town and city scenes.

The artist has a fascination with the way water ripples and changes constantly. A difficult task for a watercolorist is to decide and keep some of the paper unpainted to maintain the dazzling whites possible to then contrast with the darks of the composition. This is particularly important while painting water and the artist is great at this technique.

Other comments by viewers of the exhibit were that the artist keeps the fluidity of water and Del Sunley liked the vibrancy of his colors. Meagher is also excellent at capturing the hustle and bustle of a city such as the crowds of people patiently waiting in line for the cable car in San Francisco at the "Powell Street Trolley" turntable. By simplifying the shapes of the crowd he achieves an overlapping of colors to help the viewer to realize the length of the line. On the famous San Francisco street where the houses are called "Painted Ladies" there are no pedestrians but the feeling of the city is still there. "China Town" has the usual crowd of people there to enjoy the sights of that famous part of the city. Mae Della Leino remarked that the color distribution in his paintings helps unify the compositions. Also in the San Francisco area is the "Golden Gate Bridge" he painted to give the illusion of the height and length of the long, suspension bridge.

Closer to home is the charming "Old Sacramento" showing tourists enjoying a ride in a horse drawn, old wagon as they view the historical old town. Meticulously drawn in great detail, you can almost see and feel the sweat of the old horse as he labors to pull the full wagon.

As you enter the city of "Reno" you are immediately deluged by the blatant advertising with the bold declaration on the city's name across the main thoroughfare. There is a great deal of detail accurately portrayed in Meagher's work.

City, River Cats at odds over money for ballpark security

A dispute between West Sacramento and the River Cats baseball team over the cost of the security services the team is supposed to reimburse the city for has spilled into court.

The city filed a lawsuit last week in Yolo County court asking for about $197,000 in security costs, interest and penalties.

Art Savage of the River City Baseball Club angrily disputed the dollar amount. The Sacramento Bee quoted him as calling the lawsuit "the last straw in a protracted series of questionable moves by the city that has done considerable harm to our relationship."

West Sacramento City Manager Joe Goeden told the News-Ledger that "it's not in my interests to pick a fight, but I want to get this issue behind us." He said that a higher cost for security in the first year of the stadium's operation resulted from various purchases and other "start-up costs," and that the annual cost for city-provided security is now lower. "They made a partial payment but have not made full payment," he added.

The reimbursement structure is outlined in a city ordinance – which Goeden believes supports the city's claim.

RCHS student files complaint over campus police officer

By Steve Marschke
News-Ledger Editor

City police officer Juan Barcenas, assigned to duty on West Sacramento's school campuses, is on administrative leave while a student's complaint against him is investigated.

"There has been no allegation of sexual misconduct," stressed Deputy Police Chief Tom Hoffman. "One student has complained. The girl has been uncomfortable with some of the contacts she has had with Juan within the past year."

The complaint is being investigated by other W.S.P.D. officers.

Hoffman said the 16-year old girl who filed the complaint is a student at River City High School, and added that sometimes children "misinterpret" things. Such may have been the case during the contacts between her and Barcenas, he said.

River City High School Principal Mort Geivett declined to comment on the incidents, but said that "Juan's presence has made a difference" in terms of students' physical safety on campus.

Barcenas has been assigned to duty at the district's schools as part of a program jointly funded by the police department and Washington Unified School District.

Two messages inviting a comment from Barcenas for this article were not immediately returned.

Suspect arrested in rape case —

A woman reported being raped early Saturday morning at the home of an acquaintance on the 3500 block of Jefferson Blvd. A man has been arrested for the attack.

"It was reported to have happened on June 9 at 3:10 a.m. The victim had been sexually and physically assaulted and had visible injuries on her head, arms and upper torso," said Officer Amy Weirich of the West Sacramento Police Dept.

The victim received medical treatment.

Weirich said the victim had been at the home of "kind of a third-party friend," and that the suspect, whom she did not know, was also present.

Suspect Faron Bastion was arrested shortly afterwards. His age and hometown were not immediately available.

Two teens arrested after chase

Two teenagers in a stolen car led police from three agencies on a chase from West Sacramento to near Rancho Murieta early Friday morning, before they were captured.

The events began at about 2:30 a.m.

"It started in the area of Hickory and Briarwood streets, with the report of a suspicious vehicle. The caller had written down a license plate, which came back as stolen," said Officer Amy Weirich of the West Sacramento Police Dept.

Officer David Stallions, a W.S.P.D. K-9 officer, was first to respond and tried to stop the suspect vehicle. The car fled.

A 39-minute pursuit, taken over by Sacramento police and sheriff's units, led to the Jackson Highway near Rancho Murieta.

"During the pursuit, they used spike strips. The car's two front tires went out, but it still didn't stop."

Finally, a Sacramento sheriff's patrol car used the "PIT" maneuver to force the suspect's vehicle out of control.

"That stands for Pursuit Intervention Technique," said Weirich. "Using the front corner (body) panel of the patrol car, they tap the rear corner panel of the suspect vehicle, and turn the steering wheel slightly. The suspect vehicle spins out."

When the stolen car spun out, a 16-year old male passenger gave himself up. A 16-year old driver continued to flee, however, until being bitten by a Sacramento police K-9 dog.

The youths' hometown was not available.

Two receive minor injuries from dog

A dog attacked a city code enforcement officer inside an Arthur St. last week. When a county animal control officer responded to the incident, he, too was bitten, said Officer Amy Weirich of the West Sacramento Police Dept.

Neither set of injuries appeared severe.

The code enforcement officers on scene "were involved in a code enforcement matter, and unaware the dog was inside the house in another room. The dog came out and attached them, biting a code enforcement officer in the rear end area and knee. Animal control responded, and that officer was also bitten, but it wasn't serious."

The code enforcement officer was driven to the hospital for treatment.

"The dog was taken to animal control, and they will do whatever it is they do," said Weirich.

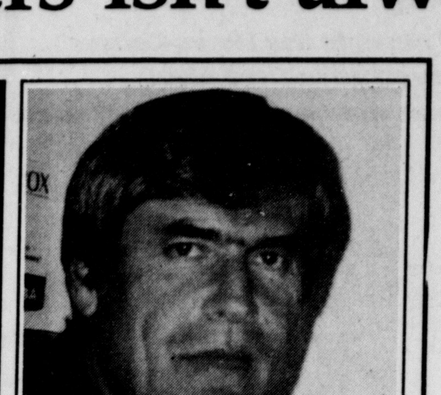
Changing barbers isn't always a traumatic experience

My Back Pages



By Daryl Fisher

Note: I was getting a haircut the other day and the lady with the scissors in her hands said, "Do you remember that nice little article you wrote about me years ago?"

"Sure," I answered.

"You wouldn't happen to have some extra copies of the newspaper it was in, would you?"

"To tell you the truth," I said, "I wouldn't even know where to look. I think I wrote that column at least six years ago and we don't exactly have the greatest archive system at the News-Ledger."

"Rats," she said. "There's somebody I really want to send a couple of those newspapers to."

"No problem," I said, quickly remembering that I hadn't had a meaningful thought in my head for weeks, "I'll just rerun it. That way you'll have all the copies you want, and I won't have to do any work this week."

"Thanks," she said.

"Thank YOU!"

My daughter recently strolled up to me, took a lengthy and disapproving look at my head, and deeply sighed.

"Is there a problem?" I asked.

"Having a bad hair day, huh, Dad?" she asked, slowly shaking her head from side to side.

"What are you talking about?" I demanded to know.

"If I was you, I'd get that mess cut," she strongly suggested. "Hippie hair went out of style a couple of decades ago."

Being already late for a baby-sitting job, she turned and rushed out the front door. I turned and rushed into the bathroom.

"She's right," I whispered to myself as I stared at my out-of-control hairdo in the slightly fogged-up bathroom mirror. "You can't put this off any longer," I told myself as I wiped a section of the mirror clean with my hand and examined my lengthy, graying hair in even greater detail.

"You know, there's absolutely no privacy in this house," said my oldest son as he stepped out of the shower and quickly reached for a towel.

"Where are you getting your hair cut these days?" I asked him.

"Get out of here!" he yelled.

I quickly exited the bathroom and went in search of my wife.

"Where's a good place to get a haircut nowadays?" I asked her.

"Well, I've been taking the boys over to Hair Expressions," she answered. "It's right next to the video store on Jefferson Boulevard. They seem to do a really nice job."

Sadly, I happen to be one of those people who do not handle change very well. From the day I was old enough to peddle my own bicycle, I have been going over to Havey's barbershop to get my hair cut. Somewhere along the line (at least 15 years ago) one of the barbers there (his name is Tom) gave me what I considered to be the perfect haircut, and from that day on, I have let no other person with scissors in his hand touch my hair.

Unfortunately, a few months ago, Tom became seriously ill and it may be quite awhile before he is able to return to work. With that in mind, and fully aware that I could wait no longer, I reluctantly drove over to Hair Expressions (even the name scared me), pushed open the front door, and bravely stepped into the unknown.

Much to my horror, the first thing I noticed was that all the barbers were women. I quickly turned to leave, but a friendly voice called out, "May I help you?"

"Well," I mumbled, "I was thinking about getting a haircut."

"Do you have an appointment?" she asked.

"No," I sighed in relief, "but thanks anyway."

"That's okay," she said as I began to head for the door, "I think Jana is free."

She cheerfully led me back to what looked to be a barber's chair (although it was nothing like the big, sturdy swivel chairs they have at Havey's) and motioned for me to take a seat.

The first thing I noticed when I sat down was that my chair was turned in the wrong direction, towards my own nervous reflection. I looked all around, and sure enough, everyone's chair was turned the wrong way. Great, I thought to myself, now I'm going to have to sit here and stare at myself in a huge mirror for half an hour.

"Hi, my name is Jana," came a sweet voice from behind me. I looked into the mirror and I could tell by the welcoming, friendly expression on her face that I was actually going to have to interact with someone who was cutting my hair.

You see, when I sit down in Tom's chair, he says, "The Usual?", and I nod my head and that's that. We rarely say another word to each other until the haircut is over, unless something really weird is going on with the weather.

"So, have you lived here long?" asked Jana with a pleasant smile.

I started to panic. Then she began to run her fingers through my hair (in a very professional way, of course), but if she hadn't already tightened an apron snugly around my neck, I'm sure I would have found an excuse to bolt out of the chair.

Anyway, for the next 30 minutes or so I watched nervously as Jana whacked off huge chunks of my hair (I'd never actually seen my hair being cut before) and answered as best I could every question which came my way.

Much to my surprise, what started out as a very trying ordeal turned out to be a rather enjoyable experience. I received a wonderful haircut and I even ended up asking Jana a few questions myself, including, "Why do you wear cowboy boots to a job where you have to stand on your feet all day long?"

Funny, but in 15-plus years, I don't think I've ever once asked Tom about his choice of footwear.

SPORTS INSIDER

By Richard Novoa

The Philadelphia 76ers are giving the Los Angeles Lakers a run for their playoff money with a stunning 107-101 upset in game one of the 2001 NBA Championship. The league "MVP" and the "Defensive player of the Year" are going face to face or is it word for word with Shaq and Kobe. The Shaq and Kobe show had mixed reviews last Sunday when Iverson burned them with 48 points while Mutombo controlled the Sixers defense to pull down the curtain on the over confident Lakers. The Lakers bounced back in game two with a 98-89 win to even up the best of seven series before it shifted back East to Philly. The Sixers were sitting pretty with the next three games on their home court but Shaquille O'Neal hammered the 76ers with 34 points and 17 rebounds to lead the Lakers to a 2-1 edge in the series.

The television ratings the finals have the NBA officials smiling with their $2.6 billion contract with NBC and TBS expiring after the 2001-02. The Lakers 96-91 win in Game 3 Sunday night drew a 16.1 rating which was a 24 percent increase over last year's Game 3 between the Lakers and Pacers. So far this year's ratings are 20 percent higher than it was in 2000. Do you think NBA commission Stern will seeking a little increase in TV revenue? I wonder if the ratings would have been that high with the Lakers tangling with the Milwaukee Bucks?

Speaking of bucks, West Sacramento's WBC Champion, Willie Jorrin, will receive $250,000 to defend his title against Irish Wayne McCullough in early September. McCullough and Jorrin fought twice in the amateurs with each fighter walking away with a victory. McCullough, 30, who has a record of 23 wins and 3 losses with 14 KO's, has went the distance with Prince Hamed and the former bantamweight champion, Erik Morales. There is catch for the quarter of million dollars Willie's going to take the bank; the fight will be in McCullough's hometown of Dublin, Ireland!

Speaking of a catch, boxing promoter Don King is back in the news as rival promoter Cedric Kushner filed a racketeering lawsuit against him seeking $12 million in damages. Remember that young boxer named Hasim Rahman? Rahman was the heavyweight who knockout Lennox Lewis and then signed a $5 million contract with King to defend his title in China. Mr. King convinced "The Rock" to dispute the rematch clause in his contract with Kushner and now they will duke it out in court! Only in America!

The River Cats (30-35), who trail Tucson by a game and half in the loss column, are home this week for another eight game home stand. The Gatos will enjoy a rare day off on Wednesday, June 13th but they will return to action on Thursday with a four game series with Salt Lake Stingers. It looks like second baseman, Jose Ortiz, might stick around Sacramento a little longer than he expected with ex-River Cat, Frank Menechino enjoying his stay with the parent club. Menechino has been playing great defense and has hit eight HR's this season. The A's sent John Jaha back to the River City for his second stint with the Gatos and will probably DH this weekend.

San Francisco and Oakland will continue their battle of the bay this weekend as the A's invade Pac Bell Park for a three game inter-league series. The A's got the best of the Giants last week winning 2 out 3 games in Oakland. The Giants (31-32) pitching is just killing them and trade rumors are starting to fly around Pac Bell. The Giants are only 7 games behind the division leading Diamondbacks so panic has not set in yet but don't be surprised to see the Giants trade for a front line pitcher.

The A's, at 31-32 are 18 games behind the Mariners and nine games off the wild card spot but its the Mariners who are on fire. The Seattle Mariners (48-13) have been putting on some impressive winning streaks this month. The Mariners, who already have the Japanese connection, signed 19-year-old Russian pitcher Oleg Korneev, an amateur free agent. The 6-foot-7, 220-pound right-hander from Moscow pitched with the Russian national team and will be report to the minor league team in Peoria, Arizona. Only in America!

See ya next week!

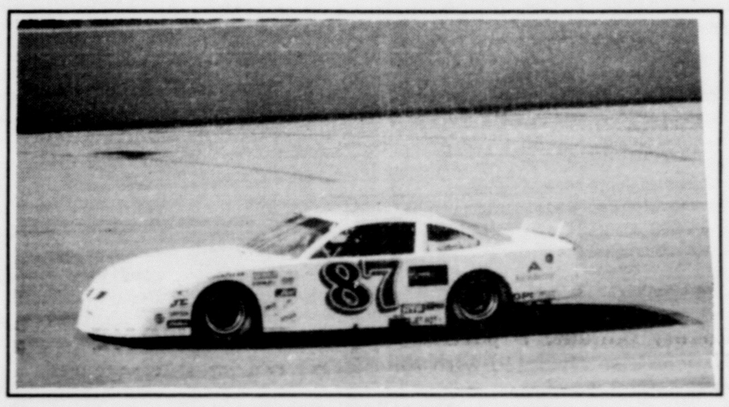
Local driver first in rookie standings

By Burry Dulbeare

Burney Lamar had a good night at the half mile Irwindale Speedway Saturday, qualifying the WaveShield - Western Funding- Shilo Inns Pontiac 9th out of a 32 car field, and finished the Food 4 Less 150 in 5th place, the highest finish for the 20 year old rookie in the current NASCAR Featherlite Southwest Series season. Burney now has four top ten and one top five finish in six races.



Burney Lamar on the race course

The 5th place jumped the W. Sacramento, CA. driver from 12th in the overall Series point standings to 6th, and from 2nd to 1st in the rookie standings. Did the youngster have any problems Saturday night? "None at all. Had a great race. We started 9th and fell back a little bit 'cause we were a little tight on the short runs, but I knew once we got a long run, we'd be O.K.. So we'd make up a little ground here and there, and there were a few cautions at the beginning. But my crew chief Dennis Olson and owner Mike Bonicelli had such a good car under me during the long runs, that towards the end during a long run we were able to pick up quite a few spots and ended up 5th".

The next race for the Southwest Series will be two weeks from now on the 1.94 mile road course at Sears Point, CA.. Asked if he's ever driven a road course, "Yes, I drove that race last year. I'm looking forward to going back this year because I know the crew will have a good car for me as they always have in the past. With their experience, we should also be able to get a good finish there, too".

To all heirs, beneficiaries, creditors, contingent creditors, and persons who may otherwise be interested in the will or estate, or both, of Willis Raymond Kyme, also known as W.R. Kyme and as Bill Kyme:

A PETITION FOR PROBATE has been filed by Clinton Caldwell Kyme in the Superior Court of California, County of Yolo.

THE PETITION FOR PROBATE requests that Clinton Caldwell Kyme be appointed as personal representative to administer the estate of the decedent.

THE PETITION requests that the decedent's will and codicils, if any, be admitted to probate. The will and any codicils are available for examination in the file kept by the court.

IF YOU OBJECT to the granting of the petition, you should appear at the hearing and state your objections or file written objections with the court before the hearing. Your appearance may be in person or by your attorney.

IF YOU ARE A CREDITOR or a contingent creditor of the deceased, you must file your claim with the court and mail a copy to the personal representative appointed by the court within four months from the date of first issuance of letters as provided inProbate Code section 9100. The time for filing claims will not expire before four months from the hearing date noticed above.

YOU MAY EXAMINE the file kept by the court. If you are a person interested in the estate, you may file with the court a Request for Special Notice (form DE-154) of the filing of an inventory and appraisal of estate assets or of any petition or account as provided in Probate Code section 1250. Pointers For Parents

Bedrooms: Creating Unique Havens For Kids

(NAPS)—Between school, vacation activities, friends and all the other things that keep children occupied, their lives can get a little harried. Sometimes youngsters need a little "down time"—and what better place to unwind than the bedroom? A child's bedroom should not just be his or her headquarters and starting point for adventures, but also a personal oasis—the one place that is truly his or her own.

When it comes to decorating children's rooms, Spiegel suggests parents start kids thinking about choices that are both functional and reflect their personality. Here are a few approaches you can take:

Creative Outlet: Children's rooms are places where their creativity can run wild, whether they are choosing a special area rug or something to hang on the wall. A good way to begin is by encouraging them to pick a theme—an interest, passion or even a favorite color—from which they can expand. A child who is interested in sports, for example, might choose a cotton soccer ball rug or curtain rods with basketball or football finials. Nature themes allow for whimsical choices, such as butterfly lights, daisy rugs or critter floor pillows.

Storage Central: This is a good time to encourage your children to get organized, as they learn that the more orderly their toys, books and other possessions, the more space they'll have for themselves. Look for storage components which fit in with their themes: a cabinet in the shape of a dollhouse, for example, or a multi-pocket screen which, in addition to storing their toys, also can provide an element of privacy for their entertainment space. In smaller rooms, an upholstered toy box can double as a chair. Whimsical touches, like a ladybug shelf with hooks or a picket fence peg hook, might even tempt your children to hang up their clothes.

Home Within a Home:

Whether it's a cozy reading corner or a mini entertainment area where children can play with friends, discuss the idea of creating a separate space within their bedrooms. For entertaining, pepper the space with fun seating elements, such as daisy-shaped beanbags or brightly colored faux fur butterfly chairs. An avid reader might like a special seat, like Spiegel's comfy, upholstered pastel chaise lounge or a two-tone beanbag chair and ottoman which are just the right size. Activity-oriented kids might opt for a specially designed table with stripes and polka dots that coordinate with ladybug and bee chairs, to do art projects or have a tea party.

Electronics Haven: Children's rooms are not complete these days without a selection of their favorite electronics. Help them pick gadgets which will go with the décor and the spirit of the room. Choose CD players and motorized CD holders in bright colors to liven up a room. Or add a cordless phone in cool, changeable hues or funky animal prints. If your child has a computer or needs a place to do homework, help him pick out a colorful desk on casters that not only serves as a mobile workstation, but will fit seamlessly into his own special space.

Kid's Resource from Spiegel is a great place to find these and other unique items for children's rooms—call 1-800-345-4500 or visit www.spiegel.com.

MANAGING YOUR MONEY

10 Ways To Find The Fat In Your Budget

by Mary Rowland, MSN MoneyCentral Expert in Mutual Funds & Financial Planning

(NAPS)—Finding the fat in your budget may not sound sexy, but try visualizing the new, svelte you—financially speaking. In just a few years, it's possible to change your lifestyle for the better by simply adhering to a few budgetary constraints. Here are my top 10 ways to trim up your budget:

With a little work, it can be easy to whip your budget into shape.

1. Focus on fixed expenses: Just because they're "fixed," it doesn't mean they're not negotiable. Many items are fixed only in that they come out of your paycheck every month, or you write checks for them automatically—like rent and life insurance.

2. Rent or mortgage: Your home is your castle, but can you afford the one you have? Moving is not something you're going to do tomorrow, but if your castle is eating up more than 25 percent of your income, start making long-term plans.

3. Utilities: Turn down the heat and air conditioning. Analyze your phone needs. Do you need so many lines? Is your cell phone essential?

4. Insurance: If your term life insurance policy is five or more years old, you're in for a pleasant surprise: you can almost certainly get a better rate. Increase the deductibles on your auto and homeowner's policies, and drop collision insurance if your car is paid for. Don't skip disability insurance, though. If you can't work due to a disability, you could jeopardize everything without insurance.

5. Groceries: Is there really that much of a difference between generic and name brand products? Do you really enjoy the prepared foods you buy? Could you make something fresh and simple—and cheaper?

6. Clothing: What can we say? The biggest enemy of a clothing budget is impulse. You need a strategy. Make a list of what you need. Shop from your list. Buy the best you can afford. Think about all the stuff hanging in your closet.

7. Transportation: This item can eat up 50 percent of a budget. Take a hard look at where you can save. Set a budget for transportation. Negotiate for bargain air fares. Cars are better made and last much longer than they used to. Get one you like. Take good care of it—and keep it two or three years longer. Walk instead of taking a cab.

8. Household and babysitting help: It's tough cutting corners here. If you've found a good caretaker for your children, don't cut his or her pay. Supportive people to help in your business and home can make your life run much more smoothly.

9. Credit: This one has a lot of opportunities for reductions. Pick up two months' worth of credit card bills and total up the interest you paid. If you pay off your credit cards, you will save that much every month.

10. Taxes: Contribute to your 401(k) and make use of healthcare and dependent care spending accounts at work.

So look at discretionary expenses to see what you can do. Think of positive lifestyle changes. Vacations, too, can be thrilling without being costly if you do some research and plan a trip that allows you to explore and further an interest. You can find the fat in your budget—it just takes a little creativity and willingness on your part.

OPINION

News-Ledger Editorial:

Property owners' rights are important, but need limits

Last week, it happened again:

A friend of this newspaper who has impeccable conservative credentials criticized the quality of a new local housing development as a potential "slum," and asked how the city government could possibly have allowed it to be built that way.

Conservatives are supposed to be in favor of property owners' rights. They believe, generally, that a landowner should be allowed to use his property how he or she wishes – within very broad guidelines.

Libertarians are even more absolute on this point than conservatives. They rarely see a justification for the government to tell a landowner what he (or she) can or can't do on his property.

A simple, bumper sticker-sized philosophy like this appeals to a lot of people. But the truth is, very few of us truly believe in what a libertarian view of property owners' rights really means. And in a crowded place like the Sacramento region, it becomes tougher to hold this viewpoint than ever before.

We are not living in the sparsely populated, low-technology society our ancestors of 100-200 years ago knew. We have become crowded, high-consumption creatures dependent on highly contrived sources of energy, water and transportation. Our consumption breeds pollution, too, at unprecedented rates.

This means that what one resident or business owner does affects the rest of us. We breath each others' air pollution, compete for limited energy and water supplies, and try to squeeze onto the same roads.

On a local level, the way we plan our cities – or fail to plan them – influences everything from traffic to crime to school quality. To refuse to plan our communities – to allow anyone to build anything anywhere – has become unthinkable.

Most of us know this.

Most people who support property rights would draw the line at, for example, allowing a neighbor to buy the residential lot next door to them and build a slaughterhouse or nuclear waste dump. Reasonable people recognize that private property rights can only be absolute when the impacts from that property can be kept absolutely within the property lines. And that's essentially impossible.

On the other hand, most people who support strong community planning standards would also agree that property rights are "important." Only a radical would toss away the Constitution's protection of private property.

There is a lot of reasonable middle ground between the two extremes – the one advocating no government control over private property, and the one advocating total government control.

Most of us agree that we should be able to object to a landowner who buys the residential lot next door to turn it into a 24-hour truck yard, for example. We also agree that, in addition to creating a land use plan, a community has the right to restrict air pollution, noise pollution, or even visual blight.

In short, most of us know a community must have some say in how private lands are planned, developed and used. Reasonable people may disagree on exactly where to draw the line that limits "property owners' rights" – but nearly all of us believe we have a right to draw that line somewhere.

As for West Sacramento in particular?

We have a right do develop community standards, and to balance those standards against the rights of the individual property owner. When each owner can find a way to keep all of his property's impacts from straying into his neighbors' yards and lives, then and only then should we entirely butt out.

And how a new subdivision is built – whether it will affect the rest of us for good or evil – is the business of West Sacramento's government and citizens. Call it "government regulations" if you like. But those aren't always dirty words.

Letters to the Editor

No more cats

I'm a city employee for the City of West Sacramento and for the last six years I have worked at the waste water treatment plant at 1991 South River Road.

I'm asking the good people of West Sacramento not to drop off their unwanted cats at the plant. I have been instructed by the Director of Public Works (Mr. Jerry Lo) that I or any other employee at the plant can no longer feed or befriend these cats.

I have been feeding the cats at my own expense for the last five years. I hope the city will have the county animal control or the S.P.C.A. take care of these cats.

Energy blame game

I was appalled (but not surprised) that former Gov. Pete Wilson pointed the finger of blame (re: state energy crisis) at present Gov. Davis. It was Wilson who held our state budget hostage unless and until the legislators agreed to that energy deregulation scheme, the specifics of which were engineered by Wilson or those close to him or those who now fatten t heir pocketbooks from the high energy rates charged Californians.

When the Energy Deregulation Act was drafted, it included a requirement that PG&E, Southern California Edison, et al divest themselves of all of their power producing plants and this created another layer of unregulated profit seekers for two of those relatively unique consumer goods, natural gas and electricity. (The term unique is used since from a practical standpoint, consumers cannot shop around for such goods, in spite of those making such big money from runaway utility price hikes describing their practice as free trade, and trying to sound innocent in so doing). Deregulation was supposed to benefit consumers and businesses, but did neither. What went wrong? An investigation seems warranted.

It was sadly interesting to note that the big price hikes for natural gas and electricity was withheld until after the 2000 presidential election. Only then did we learn that our new president, George W. Bush, received heavy financial support from those same people (energy middlemen) who are now making out like bandits in a big way. That's because California voters' majority did not support Bush and California is an energy-importing state, and Bush's home state of Texas not only supported him at the polls, and is an energy exporting state.

So far, President Bush and VP Cheney say the energy problem is California's. No reason for the Federal Energy Regulation Commission to become involved. Such a claim sends a message: All states should become independent and have their own systems for critical consumer goods and services.
